DUTIES OF THE POSITION

Reporting to the Brent Hughes (Assistant Professor – Biology Department), the Graduate Assistant will help support research activities in Hughes’ research group at Sonoma State University, specifically, for our funded project through the Ocean Protection Council (Q0079 Monitoring Estuary MPAs). This project is a three-year project, and it is critical for informing the state as to how the Marine Life Protection Act is working in the state’s estuaries. This project is critical to CSU’s missions because it is training several graduate (or soon-to-be-graduate) students across 3 CSUs (Sonoma, Long Beach, and San Jose State). This training is also critical for developing the next generation of coastal resource managers and policy makers for the state of California. The majority of this work can be done at home, but is considered essential work for our project, as we are in the data analysis (i.e., telecommuting) portion of the project. We have about 10 field days planned in Drakes Estero and Bolinas Lagoon and several one-time trips to three estuaries in northern California where the Technician (and field partner) will follow Sonoma State’s health guidelines and maintain social distancing at all times.
